 Minor in Politics and International Relations

Why Choose Our Politics and International Relations Program?

In King's Politics and International Relations program, you'll analyze why societies look the way they do, and discover how politics is the ultimate tool for change. You'll begin with an essential education in international relations, Canadian politics, political theory, comparative and developing politics, plus law and public policy. In your third and fourth years, you can explore and refine your interests: engage with Canadian and international law; practice negotiating peace in conflict zones; learn how to change public policies that affect your own community. When you graduate, you will have the knowledge and skills you need to succeed in law, government and public service, business, journalism or public relations, national and international NGOs, or consulting.

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

1. Diverse Curriculum:

Gain a well-rounded education across all fields of politics: Canadian politics, international relations, comparative politics/politics of development, and political theory.

2. Unique Certificate in Law and Public Policy:

Sharpen your legal and policy mind with our pre-law program, exclusive to King's.

3. Experiential Learning Opportunities:

Redefine your education through unforgettable experiences: study the European Union in Europe, visit the African Union headquarters in Ethiopia, and explore international political economies in Ghana and Tanzania. Discover a world of possibilities at King's!

4. Active and Engaged Faculty:

Learn from professors who bring their latest research into the classroom and offer mentorship opportunities.

5. Leadership and Travel Opportunities:

Participate in student government, travel with the King's Political Science Students' Association, and build professional networks at alumni events.

“

The small class sizes really complement the way I like to learn and help me connect with my professors. The small, tight-knit community that we have is a perfect experience. The program also teaches you a lot of skills – how to look at the world around you, analyze different institutions, understand governance better, and also enhance social skills, communication skills, and team-building.”
