

KING'S UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

Minor in Writing and Social Change

Writing at King's, part of the Department of English, French, and Writing, offers courses that

- focus on Writing pedagogy and practice
- advance anti-oppressive and socially transformative perspectives
- combine concepts and theory with opportunities for practice
- facilitate career-readiness and on-campus work opportunities
- improve all-round writing skills
- prepare students for graduate study
- count as Category B credits.

The Minor in Writing and Social Change includes Writing courses that have been developed in conjunction with programs specific to King's—programs such as Social Work, Social Justice and Peace Studies, Thanatology, Catholic Studies for Teachers, Childhood and Youth Studies, and Disability Studies. It can also usefully supplement studies in more traditional disciplines like English, Sociology, and Psychology.
