

CONFERENCE DETAILS

Join us for an interdisciplinary conference that engages major issues of philosophy, literature, and social thought!

When & Where

- Monday, March 23
6-9pm in the Vitali Extension
- Tuesday, March 24
6-9pm in the Vitali Lounge

Parking

- For family and friends of presenters, please contact Jason Hoult (email below) to arrange for a parking pass.

Food and Drink

- A selection of appetizers and drinks will be available to all who attend.

Contact

- jhoul2@uwo.ca

Follow the TNLA club

- @thenewliberalarts

King's Scholar

CAPSTONE CONFERENCE

This conference features presentations from students in the King's Scholar program. Students will present papers on a variety of topics that represent their culminating research essays. The conference also includes poems by King's Scholar students, which will initiate our proceedings.

SCHEDULE

MONDAY, MARCH 23

6:10 WELCOME & STUDENT POEM

- Ella Mann

6:30 PANEL 1

"Twice Two Makes Terror: Rationalism, Action, and the Revolutionary Mind" by Aditya Narayan

"The Renaissance and Astrology: Ficino's Translations, Interpretations, and Prognostications" by Bailey Rowell

"In the Cellar of the Self: How Dostoevsky's Underground Man Anticipates Psychoanalysis and Existentialism" by Victoria Byers

8:00 MIX & MINGLE

You are welcome and encouraged to mix, mingle, and enjoy the food and drinks.

KING'S UNIVERSITY COLLEGE
266 Epworth Ave.
London, ON

TUESDAY, MARCH 24

6:10 WELCOME & STUDENT POEMS

- Ian Topham
- John Kukurudziak

6:30 PANEL 2

"Whitman's World: The Self, the State, and the Imagined Nation" by Ben Baldasaro

"Sport and Society" by Ian Baker

"Machiavelli and the Long Nineteenth Century: The Political Vision in Machiavelli's The Prince and Its Legacy in the Italian Unification" by Sacha Sangalli

"The Juxtaposition of Racial Nationalism and Civic Nationalism in the Reconstruction Era" by McKenna Smith

8:10 MIX & MINGLE

You are welcome and encouraged to mix, mingle, and enjoy the food and drinks.

Thank you to all of our presenters, moderators, staff, and audience members for your generous participation in our conference!